Step into Bellevue shoe boutique Posh on Main, and you'll suspect you've entered an alternate universe. A crystal chandelier sparkles from the ceiling, a plush mohair ottoman beckons and if it's a weekend, vivacious owner Angela Self greets you with champagne and a chocolate truffle. This is clearly Girl World – a place where $200 - $700 designer shoes rest not on the shelves but on ornate pedestals, lending them the aura of fine art. Self, a former student at New York's Fashion Institute of Technology and self-proclaimed shoe junkie, says she wanted to create a cozy space where women could sit back, relax “and just indulge.” And with indulgences such as jeweled Hollywood slings ($495), multicolored Missoni flats ($425) and sophisticated Loeffler Randall gold-edged linen peep toes ($365), a trip to Self's world is a guilty pleasure indeed.
